CARRANZA TROOPS HELP FIGHT BANDITS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Brownsville, Tex., Aug. 14.—Carranza troops from the Matamoros garrison are giving their aid to American troops and Texas Rangers in their campaign of extermination against Mexican bandits. Caught between forces on both sides of the border, it is believed that the bandits will be annihilated.

Word reached here from Santa Maria early today that the Carranza soldiers had killed several bandits fleeing from the American forces as they tried to cross the frontier into Mexico. The surviving bandits abandoned their efforts to escape in Mexico and scattered in the brush on the American side. There they are being hunted down.

Private William F. Hall, a trooper of the Third U. S. Cavalry, has been brought to Brownsville to be treated for a wound accidentally inflicted by a citizen of Lyford.

HAITIEN AFFAIRS STILL UNSETTLED

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Aug. 14.—Efforts of the malcontents in Haiti, who are refusing to support the newly elected president are to be met with drastic measures.

Admiral Caperton has been given full power, it was stated today, to declare martial law at any point where disturbances are threatened. So soon as Colonel Waller and his regiment of marines reach Port au Prince, it is expected that another general round up of natives and confiscation of arms will take place.

Officials here declare that present indications are that American blue-jackets and marines will have to remain in Haiti for months. Until the entire island is cleaned up and agitators banished, officials do not believe that permanent peace is possible.

France, whose financial interests in the republic are very great, has approved all of the plans for pacification made by the state department.

GERMAN RETREAT IN BALTIC REGION

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Petrograd, Aug. 14.—German forces in the Baltic provinces have been driven back twenty miles by the continued attacks of Russian reinforcements sent to that section of the eastern war theater, but it is the general impression here today that this will merely delay and not avert the abandonment of the Niemen-Bug line of defenses to which the armies of Grand Duke Nicholas are retreating in Poland.

The main Russian forces at Kovno have already been withdrawn, small forces being left to protect the fortress and hold back the Germans on the Niemen as long as possible. The inhabitants of Grodno, Bielestok, Bialsk and Brest Litovsk have been notified to leave those cities and withdraw into the interior.

It was estimated today that the refugees withdrawing into the interior of Russia from the cities and towns which the Germans have captured are approaching, number more than 1,500,000. They are being assisted in every way possible by the government.

The influx of the steadily increasing streams of refugees is causing no panic in the interior. The Russians accept the situation without alarm because of the fact that the main Russian armies have escaped the German traps and that only time for reorganization and the manufacture of munitions is necessary to remake the troops into the greatest fighting machine in Europe.

Compliment for Kingston.

A descriptive review of the commercial, industrial, agricultural and historical development of New York state with maps and charts have just been issued by the publishing house of George F. Crane. Among other things, it contains a review of all the cities and the principal villages of the state which is illustrated by pictures. The city of Kingston is not neglected as more space is given to the review and more illustrations of Kingston are used than of any other city, except a very few of the largest cities of the state. It is the only city of which a reference is made to the municipal administration, it stating that the municipal government of Kingston is honestly and capably administered by progressive officials.

Time's Changes.

When they are first married she wonders why there isn't a brass band and a delegation of prominent citizens to greet him at every street corner. But a few years later she wonders how he manages to dodge the dogcatcher when he is on the street—Cincinnati Enquirer.

KAISER ORDERS TROOPS SPARED

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 14.—Five of the forts defending the great fortress city of Kovno are reported in unofficial dispatches to have been completely smashed or else badly damaged by the fire of the Germans' heavy artillery.

The fact that the German army of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is battering away at the Kovno defenses with their heavy guns instead of trying to carry them by storm with infantry shows that the German commander is unwilling to sacrifice the enormous number of men that such an undertaking would entail.

The order to spare the German troops and use artillery in the operations to take Kovno is said to have come directly from Emperor William.

Despite the strong rally of Grand Duke Nicholas's Russian army, the German progress is unchecked. East and southeast of Warsaw the Austro-German forces are sweeping all before them.

Northeast of Warsaw the critical points are Kovno and the region directly west of the Dvina river. Southwest of Riga the forces of General von Buelow are compelled to withstand violent counter-attacks. The Russians have been strongly reinforced in that region, receiving an enormous number of men that were withdrawn from the sector of Warsaw.

The fierceness of the fighting has resulted in heavy losses on both sides. The Russian casualties have been staggering owing to the great number of dead who have died from lack of medical attention.

Kovno, upon which the eyes of all are turned right now, is defended by 11 powerful, modern forts as well as by numerous redoubts. They lie about three miles from the city proper, seven of them facing the East Prussian frontier. Three others face toward Vilna and the other one guards the Kovno-Vilna railway bridge.

HOPE TO AROUSE MEXICAN PEOPLE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Mexican public opinion is the administration's trump card. It is depended on either to force Carranza to accept the peace conference plan or to be deserted by his chief generals.

State department officials admitted today that this is the real reason why the appeal, signed by the U. S. and Latin-America, and endorsed by the European nations having large financial interests in Mexico, is to be sent to every section of Mexico for publication. And, until the appeal is in the hands of the governors of the various states and the military leaders, it will not be made public here.

The appeal it is stated here today simply says in conciliatory language that Mexico must become tranquil and promises that a provisional government, decided on at a peace conference and to which pledges of support are made, will receive immediate recognition by the nations of the world and so be able to finance a plan of regeneration.

Secretary Lansing still was hopeful today that the pressure being brought to bear upon Carranza will swing him into line. But the general plans, it was admitted, provide for the possibility that he will not. Then his chief generals will be approached and it will be explained to them that if the first of the concessions the revolution he will have to do so with his own money, while the provisional government that is to be set up by the peace convention will have unlimited funds. And officials point out that a financial argument of this sort will prove very effective in dealing with the majority of the military leaders of all factions.

Officials of the war department say that the border situation has improved materially and that the Texas authorities seem to have it well in hand. The bandits are being rounded up and many are being killed, although the number is purposely minimized. General Funston, it was explained, has full authority to distribute his troops as he pleases and he has taken precautions against any attack upon any of the towns in the Brownsville district which is the hot bed of the fighting.

On Friday, the Thirteenth.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Baltimore, Aug. 14.—Friday, the 13th, was certainly a hoodoo day for Albert Seligman, 30 years old, of 13 South Central avenue. Seligman wandered from East to South Baltimore last night and was found at 10:13 o'clock by a policeman with his arms outstretched, claiming to have a lamp post. At the police station Seligman said he had "about 13 drinks and was all in." The hoodoo number was further applied to the prisoner when he was placed in cell No. 13.

CARRANZA ORDERS ASSAULT ON TORREON

By Telegram to The Freeman.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 14.—Gen. Carranza's reply to Gen. Villa's proposal of an armistice for discussion of a compromise by the Mexican factions was an order for an attack on Torreon. Reports received at Juarez today state that the Carranzistas have already begun their attack on Villa's defenses at Torreon.

Villa is expected to leave for the south immediately, though he claims that his forces at Torreon are strong enough to repel the enemy. Since his arrival at the border he has sent to Torreon great quantities of ammunition.

No details of the fighting at Torreon have been received here yet, but it is understood that the attacking Carranzistas number about 18,000 men. Villa's defending army is believed to contain 28,000 men.

PEACE RUMORS HAVE NO FOUNDATION

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 14.—The International News Service is authorized to state that peace rumors circulated here and abroad are entirely unfounded. This authorization comes from highest government quarters.

From the same sources it is learned that no reason is known for the cancellation of great wheat orders in the United States. Whatever the cause of the cancellation, it is not an indication that peace is imminent. The foregoing dispatch was received from the London bureau of the International News Service today in response to instructions cabled from New York to ascertain, if possible, whether the cancellation of wheat orders at Chicago was due to expectation that the European war would soon end.

COTTON EXPORTS NEARLY DOUBLE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Exports of cotton in July this year were nearly double those for the same month in 1914, the census bureau today announced. The total for July, 1915, was 243,522 bales, including linters, against 126,211 bales in July, 1914.

Claims of cotton men that the British blockade has interfered seriously with their business are borne out in part, however, by the figures for the 12 months ending July 31. The total for the period this year was 8,543,573 against 9,150,801 in 1914, a drop of nearly three quarters of a million bales.

No cotton went to Germany in July this year. Last year the shipments there for July were 41,291 bales. Other countries, however, increased their purchases of the American staple. Great Britain took 58,944 in July this year against 43,777 bales in the month last year; exports to France rose from 2,522 to 27,209 bales and to Italy from 22,758 to 52,809. To all countries, the exports jumped from 15,863 to 104,400 bales.

Why Spoil the Scenery?

In view of the all too numerous accidents, both on land and water, the traveling public can but be exceedingly thankful for the "safety first" policy that is now being put into active operation everywhere. But those traveling on the lines of the New York Central Railroad, especially along the beautiful Hudson river, are rather bitter in their complaint of the manner in which the view is completely spoiled by the arrangement of the windows in the new steel cars. Each car is carefully provided with double windows, the bottom sash of each such window being about three inches in width. When raised, as is almost a necessity for tolerable traveling in the heat of summer, these windows each raise to a different height, so that the one or worse yet the two sashes come exactly across the line of vision of the person in the seat. Unless exceedingly tall, or a child, one can get absolutely no view of the passing panorama, except by craning the neck most uncomfortably or scrooching to a back breaking position. Passengers are very often heard questioning as to why this arrangement of raising the car windows might not be adjusted so as to permit the traveler to enjoy the country he or she is passing through.

Prizes Soon Announced.

The Ulster Garden Club, assisted by Mr. Hook, manager of the farm bureau, has made the final inspection of the children's gardens in this city, and in addition to the prizes that will be given, there will be honorable mention made of a number of gardens that were excellent, although not quite up to the prize standard. The announcement of the prize winners and those who received honorable mention will be made in the columns of The Freeman, early next week.

PLEADS GUILTY TO SPREADING DISEASE

Woman who Broke Quarantine

Nearly Escapes to Connecticut on a Technicality but is Finally Punished.

After being discharged because the information against her had been mislaid, nearly making her escape from the city, and arrested again just as the Rhinebeck ferry was pulling out of Rondout, being re-arrested before Recorder Lang on a new warrant and demanding a jury trial, the date being fixed and a jury drawn, Miss Mary Whispell finally pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking quarantine on Friday in recorder's court and was fined $25.

The final disposition of the case came as a climax to the events that preceded the arraignment of Miss Whispell before Recorder Lang on Friday morning. She was arrested some time ago when she left the residence of Mrs. Christiana on North Front street, where she was quarantined for scarlet fever and went for a visit to Spillway, at the Asokan reservoir, where she spent some time with friends, returning to the Christiana home later. She was arraigned at the house and held under bonds for her appearance on Friday, when the information had been mislaid and on the motion of her attorney, Henry Klein, the recorder was forced to discharge her.

Mayor Canfield, who appeared for the prosecution, immediately asked for a new warrant for her arrest and Health Officer Stelle jumped in his Reo car and hastened to his home to secure the necessary blanks needed in quarantine cases. In the meantime Miss Whispell left the court room and proceeded to the West Shore railroad, expecting to get a train for Connecticut. Sergeant Hanley was detailed to shadow her.

When Miss Whispell reached the station she found that there was no train until later and she engaged a taxi and hurried down to the Rhinebeck ferry, expecting to get out of town before another warrant could be served on her by the police. Sergeant Hanley, unobserved by her, secured another taxi and followed her to the ferry. She was forced to wait some time for a ferry and just as she boarded the boat Sergeant Hanley telephoned to the city hall and learned that the warrant had been issued and was told to place her under arrest. He did so.

She was brought back to the city hall and after some discussion demanded a jury trial and a jury was drawn and the trial set for Tuesday evening. The recorder informed her that she would have to furnish $500 bonds for her appearance.

After talking the matter over with her attorney Miss Whispell suddenly changed her plea to guilty and the fine was imposed.

This settled the case, which has attracted considerable attention.

IMPROVEMENTS AT FORSYTH PARK

The city authorities will shortly start the work of erecting comfort stations and swings, installing city water and placing benches in Forsyth Park. Joy's Woods, and it is expected that this work will be completed by Wednesday, August 25, when the Sunday school of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church will hold its field day and basket picnic on the grounds. This year the school was unable to secure a suitable boat for its annual excursion and after some discussion it was decided to hold the field day and picnic instead. The school has extended a cordial invitation to the public and there will be something doing all day long starting at 10 o'clock that morning. There will be baseball and games and the committee in charge have arranged a fine program for the day's sports.

Summer Hotel Burned.

Forty New York boarders stood and shivered in their night gowns, others in their birthday suits, when the Lakeview House, a mile back of Fleischmanns was burned to the ground Thursday morning. Hardly a person in the hotel was able to save a stitch of clothing so quickly did the house burn. Many lost their return tickets and money and a collection was taken up in Fleischmanns to buy new clothing and transportation to New York. The building was owned by Nathaniel Engleman of New York.

Verdict Against City.

At the conclusion of the trial of the case of Mary Dee against the city of Kingston before City Judge Brinnier and a jury on Friday afternoon and evening a verdict of $75 was brought in for the plaintiff by the jury. The action was brought to recover $300 for damages to plaintiff's property by reason of the city's blasting. Judge N. Frank O'Reilly appeared for the plaintiff and Joseph M. Fowler for Corporation Counsel W. D. Brinnier.

Lay-off in Railway Shops.

Twenty-six employees of the Ulster & Delaware shops on East 4th Street were laid off on Friday night indefinitely. For some time the shop employees have been working only three-quarter time. Lack of work is the reason for the lay-off.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN BALTIMORE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Aug. 14.—One of the most spectacular and threatening fires that has visited Baltimore for years, broke out in the heart of the city early today, destroyed the furniture factory of Goldstrom Brothers and damaged St. Elizabeth's home. Two firemen were injured by the collapse of the Goldstrom building. The loss was $150,000.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 14.—Trading was comparatively quiet on the stock exchange this morning with changes in the active issues irregular. Sentiment among the traders was mixed, making the tone uncertain. Sloss-Sheffield 2 1/2 to 51 1/2. Brooklyn Rapid Transit continued under pressure, declining 1/2 to 83 1/2. American Woolen issues were in unusually good demand, responding to the announcement that the company would give up its New Jersey charter and incorporate in Massachusetts. The common stock, which closed yesterday at 33 1/2, moved up to 37 1/2, and the preferred rose from 92 1/2 to 94 1/2. Rumley common yielded 1 1/2 to 10. Fractional advances were made in Erie, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific. Reading declined 1/2 to 147.

CARRANZA PREPARES TO FIGHT THE U. S.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Gen. Carranza is getting ready to fight the United States. That he will prove a formidable obstacle to a settlement of the Mexican troubles by force of arms, was admitted in official circles today. Consequently the persuasion to have him enter the proposed "peace conference" and abide by its decision is being redoubled.

Information reached the administration today from an unimpeachable source that a number of the insurgent bands who have been fighting his forces are already surrendering to Carranza. They make only one stipulation in throwing down their arms; that they be employed by the first chief in resisting armed intervention by the U. S. or any other force alien to Mexico. Officials of army and navy who have insisted all along that the proposed policy of diplomatic readjustment is doomed to failure say these bands are well armed and equipped and are seasoned veterans. Under the leadership of Carranza and Obregon they would make any work of pacification by American soldiers a very difficult one and that would surely cost thousands of American lives.

A report that created a stir in army circles was received from Gen. Funston to the effect that the majority of the raiders in Texas were Carranza soldiers and officers. He made it clear, however, that he believed they were acting without orders from their chief. This report was made public after it had been submitted to President Wilson. It follows:

"Nothing serious has occurred within the last few days. It is known that the principal part of the band of outlaws was driven across the Rio Grande into Mexico. It is now established beyond doubt that a considerable portion of the band of outlaws came from Mexico and were officers and soldiers of Carranza's forces, doubtless acting without authority of their chief.

"Once on this side of the river they were joined by about 25 Texan Mexicans, all well armed and mounted, and proceeded to raid through the country as far as Nogales." The Carranza agency here was quick to deny the Funston report. The first chief's representatives declared Funston must have received wrong information. On the contrary, Carranza, his agency says, has offered to co-operate with the United States government in every way in preventing armed bands crossing into Texas or any place else where Carranza is in control. Carranza's representatives here say that he has issued orders to his border commanders that all bands attempting to flee to safety in Mexico shall be rounded up and turned back to the United States officials. Any who resist are to be killed, it is said.

The Carranza agency refused to comment on the report that the first chief's forces were being greatly augmented. They said, however, that it was only natural that Carranza would resist to the last cartridge and the last man all armed attempts to force him to surrender the fruits of his "now almost successful" revolution. They said it would be foolish to discuss eventualities at this time. They are still hopeful that the United States and the Latin-American powers will realize that Carranza recognition is the only way to peace.

Kingston Savings Bank Changes.

Judge Betts was elected counsel for the Kingston Savings Bank at a meeting of the bank trustees held at the banking house on Wall street Friday evening, to succeed the late Hon. John J. Linson, who was the bank's attorney for twenty years. Judge Betts resigned as president of the bank and Myron Teller, who has been first vice-president for a number of years, was elected to the presidency. George Burgevin was elected first vice president to succeed Mr. Teller. Judge Betts has been one of the trustees of the bank for a number of years.

Easy to Effect Saving.

The prospect of a rise in the price of mustard should not cause much consternation; is there any item on which a saving could more easily be effected? The head of a famous firm that has built a fortune upon the manufacture of mustard once confessed that the money came to him not from the mustard we use but the mustard we waste. Not one of us but proves the truth of the statement every time we use the mustard pot and dab down on the side of our plate five times the quantity we are likely to eat.

Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips, widow of Peter Phillips, died at her home, No. 45 West Chestnut street, on Thursday, aged 84 years. Her husband was the superintendent of the old Delaware & Hudson boatyard at Rondout where many canal boats were built in former years. The funeral will be held from the late residence on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Martin J. Tierney of Middletown was killed when a steam valve exploded on an engine on the Ontario & Western railroad near Liberty on Thursday. Both Tierney and his fireman, Frank Wygant, jumped from the train half scalded. Tierney sustained a fracture of the skull from which he died instantly. Wygant started after the train and soon caught the engine as the steam was running down fastly. The body of Tierney was taken to Middletown.

George D. Winfield died in this city on Thursday aged 83 years. The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the chapel of J. Carr & Son, with interment on Monday in Goshen, N. Y. Mr. Winfield was a former resident of Greenville, Orange county, and came to Kingston about three years ago and has conducted a dairy farm on Lucas avenue. Beside his widow he is survived by three daughters, Hazel and Goldie, who reside at home, and Mrs. Edward Dupuy of New York city, and two sons, Chancellor of Schenectady and Howard of this city.

Mrs. Grosch, widow of August Grosch, died at her home on Pine street, Ellenville, on Wednesday afternoon, after a lingering illness of cancer at the age of 74 years. Nicholas Hallock, aged 88 years, passed away on August 5 at the home of his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Bamford Robb and Mrs. John Sherman, at Seattle, Washington, where he had been visiting since July 31. His illness was very brief and the news of his death was learned in Milton by many friends with sincere grief and also with surprise, for Mr. Hallock was a man of remarkable vitality, so active and so youthful that when he started for California and other places of interest in the west this spring everyone looked forward to the time when they should welcome him home after a pleasant visit. There is not a person in Marlborough or Milton who had the privilege of knowing him who will not mourn his loss sincerely, as will many other friends in Washington, where he spent his winters with his son, Lendal V. Hallock, and on Long Island, where he lived for many years and where he has hosts of friends. During the past twelve years he resided at Milton with his nephew, Henry Hallock, on the farm which was his boyhood home. Mr. Hallock was an expert in the raising of flowers and vegetables and for many years was a judge at the mineola fair on Long Island. Since his return to Milton, he has held the position of lecturer to the Grange there, where his wonderful knowledge of plant life proved both valuable and entertaining. He is survived by only one child, his son, Lendal V. Hallock, of Washington, D. C.

FIELD OF SPORTS.

Notes of Baseball, Pugilism, and Other Lines of Athletics.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 14.—For some time before yesterday's game between the Giants and Dodgers, Charles H. Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn, was worried. He chanced to discover that his club was returning home on Friday, the thirteenth, and all the superstitions in vogue instantly arose in his mind. He rummaged through his desk, found his favorite Billiken, said a few mystic words, and he declares the Billiken told him not to worry as no cross eyed girl nor load of barrels nor any other "jinx" had any power over the Dodgers at the present time. After that Ebbets smiled, grinned and laughed loudly as his team made merry with the Giants.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 14.—Having made the greatest cleanup in the history of the national regatta by winning every one of the six events in which they entered yesterday, the sturdy oarsmen of the Duluth Boat Club can't see anything but a repetition of their performance in today's races. Weather conditions today are similar to those of yesterday—smooth water and clear skies.

New York, Aug. 14.—Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh fighter who recently returned from the other side, will meet Jim Coffey, another contender for the heavyweight crown worn by Jess Willard, in a ten round go at the Garden on October 19.

New York, Aug. 14.—Manager Donovan of the Yankees is releasing out his old player. He has released Jack Warhop, Ed Sweeney and Charley Mullen, pitcher, catcher and substitute first baseman, respectively, to the Richmond International League club.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—Clarence Carman last night defeated George Wiley in a 20 mile motor-paced race. Carman jumped into the lead at the start and sensational spurts at the ten and fifteen miles increased his advantage. The time was 24:07.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14.—It was announced today that the Pirates had purchased Rube Benton, the star pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds.

RAILROAD OWNERSHIP.

The popular belief that Wall Street owns the railroads of the United States is disproved by a compilation recently made by the Bureau of Railway Economics from the returns of the railroads to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which shows that the stock of American railways at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, was distributed among 622,284 stockholders whose average interest return was $625.81 each, or 5.2 per cent on his investment. These figures explode the fallacy that railroad stockholders are plutocratic puppets who live on the fat fried from the public purse by the fire of corporation greed.

The average holding was $13,958 per value. No dividends were paid on 34 per cent of the outstanding stock and 43 per cent of the dividends which were paid came out of the surplus. A very large percentage represents duplication in the form of dividends paid out of the treasury of one company into that of another which owned stock of the first company, and was used by the receiving company to make up its dividend to its own stockholders. When it is considered also that one-eighth of the total dividend paid was made up of the extra dividend declared by the Union Pacific in distributing its holdings of Southern Pacific stock under a decree of the United States Court, it will be readily realized that the railroad system of the country is not paying much of a return on the capital invested. Mortgage investments pay 5 1/2 and 6 per cent.

This failure is due partly to general business depression but there are increasing expenses and drains on the transportation system, on whose successful operation depends in unappreciated measure our national prosperity, which ought to receive careful attention.

President Loe of the Delaware & Hudson Company in his last annual report called attention to "the increasing difficulties under which the most solvent railways must compete for the capital necessary for their continued development to keep pace with the forward strides of general industry." He pointed out the increasing strife between railways and states and municipalities which he asserted has "become more intense by reason of the advancing rates offered and the freedom of such investments from the Federal income tax and the inquisitorial features attending its enforcement while, so far as it is with manufacturing or industrial corporations, the same effect has sprung from the longer establishment and enhanced stability of the issuing corporations." "Not only do these issues compete with those of railways for the share of the limited investment required by the latter, but the augmented governmental activities that they suggest, tend to increase the general burdens of taxation, of which so disproportionately a large share is invariably imposed upon the railways," which pay in taxes $38.26 out of every $100 of operating gross receipts remaining after the payment of wages, operating expenses and interest on indebtedness.

President Loe's conclusion was that "especially in view of the drain upon the world's resources that is attending the great European war and that is likely to continue long after that war has been closed, these facts ought to receive earnest thought. They indicate a great necessity and a great opportunity for unselfish, unprejudiced and constructive statesmanship." Such statesmanship is being exercised by most railroads. If politicians and demagogues will practice it also, there is hope that one of our most necessary and democratic institutions will succeed and that no more railroad receiverships will be necessary.

Opponents of vaccination who have urged that tetanus, or lockjaw, may be contracted through vaccine virus are confounded by the result of investigations conducted by Director John F. Anderson of the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health Service, who states that tetanus is never contracted through its use. The limited number of authentic cases developing after its use invariably have been due to contamination of the wound subsequent to vaccination. The Hygienic Laboratory is charged by law with the regulation of the manufacture and sale of vaccines and serums and in thirteen years has examined specifically for the tetanus organism sufficient vaccine to vaccinate over two million persons. In no instance was the presence of tetanus bacilli established. Since 1904 records have been kept of all tetanus cases supposed to be in any way connected with vaccine. There were only forty-one cases, twenty-nine of which ended fatally. In a majority of the forty-one cases it was learned that many others were treated with the same lot of virus without harmful results. Tests of the virus from the original packages failed to reveal the presence of tetanus organisms. During the eleven year period covered by the investigation it is estimated that thirty-one million people were vaccinated. The conclusion of the investigator is that where tetanus manifests itself, infection is received by contamination of the vaccination wound in the same manner as the infection of any other surgical wound and that with ordinary precautionary measures there is not the slightest fear of the development of the disease. This conclusion is shared by all sensible people.

LIBRARIES AND CHILDREN.

(By Our Woman Editor).

Down in the teeming immigrant quarter of New York is a children's room in one of the branch libraries, and what do you suppose are some of the well-thumbed books circulating among those boys and girls of Russian, Hungarian and Polish origin? Librarians on the East Side tell us that down there it is quite impossible to keep "Lincoln books" and "Grant books" on the shelves, so great is the demand to know something about those sturdy American figures. When children in that district literally wear out hundreds of copies of those books every year, the public library must be true to its professed mission not only to offer entertainment, but to help educate and open the way to a bigger and truer patriotism.

But they do not enter the libraries asking for such books; indeed no. Trooping in, shy and dirty, sometimes with such black little hands that they must first be sent back for a good scrubbing, their plea is for "Wildwest Pete," "Deadwood Dick" or something equally fierce and thrilling.

Of course the librarian cannot ask them to pass from the ridiculous to the sublime right away, so she talks to them a bit about another story, full of action but not so lurid. Then suddenly she remembers "Just the thing you want," tells them what it is all about, shows them the pictures and then—"Wouldn't you like to read it?" And away they go with the book safely tucked under their arm, but not before a promise has been given to be "sure to return next week for the story-hour."

Can you imagine what these story-hours mean to immigrant children, some of whom have parents who can neither read nor write? Chicago started its story-hour in 1908, and the following year there was a 50 per cent increase in the number of books circulated among boys and girls.

It is a stolid, indifferent child who will not yield to the influence of a story, and public libraries that have set apart rooms, or just corners, for children and instituted the story-hour are reporting such definite good accomplished that the movement is spreading from city to city and from state to state. Three libraries for the exclusive use of children is the proud report that comes from Cleveland, Ohio; and where there is not a whole building for their use, rooms are often set apart, made particularly festive and bright, with chairs for small folk, books in low cases and little odds and ends to enchant and educate them and invite them again and again.

In New York and other large cities, professional story-tellers go from library to library, and that they are eagerly welcomed by the young folk needs no other proof than the long line of boys and girls who patiently wait for two hours the beginning of an entertainment as delightful as it is new to them.

If anyone flinks fairy stories are on the wane, listen to this: In just one branch library in New York there are on the shelves 1,000 of those childhood favorites, yet times without number it happens that eager little readers are devouring all but a dozen. As they grow older they pass on to something better, but meanwhile "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Alice in Wonderland," and the marvelous "Jungle Books" never cease to charm.

But one thing is imperative—they must come with clean hands. If they cannot pass muster, back they must go, for the books cannot be entrusted to the hands that will mar or deface them, and so the public library is educational in its widest sense.

You know some of our beginners in American citizenship are sadly in need of instruction in hygiene, and in the books the children carry to tenement homes there is many times a neat little folder inside urging the beauty and healthfulness of cleanliness in person and in the homes.

And it would be well if books destined to fall into the hands of older people always carried similar folders, for we sometimes see books sent out from public libraries that make us hesitate to look within their covers.

With public libraries doing so much to encourage the child to wholesome reading habits, what about our homes?

Good books, some of the wonderful biographies of the luminous figures in our history, and others as helpful, are made most fascinating for children; and if it is true, as some librarians tell us, that when it happens in the reading hour that the leader comes to Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, there are dozens of voices ready to repeat with her those famous words, we might remember to make the classic familiar in our homes.

FRANCES SHAFFER.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"What's Jiggs sitting over there like a dumpty for?" "Sh-h! He's arguing with his wife."—Buffalo Express.

"What's this?" "The menu for the lawyer's banquet tonight." "Ah, the bill of particulars."—Detroit Free Press.

"Is Dr. Bings looking for any particular chair in the university?" "No; any one will suit him if only it's an easy chair."—Baltimore American.

"Oh, mamma," cried little Elsie at the supper table, "why didn't you tell me this morning we were going to have ice cream? I could have enjoyed it all day."—Boston Transcript.

"What chance have I got with that girl? One of her admirers owns an automobile and the other has a motor boat." "Son, if she likes you, a trip to the movies will please her just as well."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Prospective Tenant (dubiously)—"Well, I'd like the place. It has modern improvements and so forth, as you say; but I don't like that ugly crack in the wall over there." Janitor (hastily)—"Crack, sir? Why, that's the private hall!"—Puck.

Called His Bluff.

There are a lot of four-flushers who go through life without learning that four-flushing is a fine art. Such are beneath contempt. But one has great admiration for those few who have mastered the game.

"If a man called me a liar," asserted one of such, "I'd sail in and lick him, if he weighed three hundred pounds."

"Well, you big bluff," answered one who was tired of listening, "I call you, right here and now. You're a liar!"

"Bluff yourself," come back the artist, without a minute's hesitation. "You don't weigh more than one-ditty, and you know what I said."—Hartford Courant.

Sensible Man.

A visitor to a west end restaurant in London, being waited on by a particularly tall and fine looking waiter with a foreign accent, asked the man his nationality.

"Oh, I'm a Hungarian," was the reply. "How come it then that a big, strong fellow like you is not in the firing line?" asked the visitor.

"Well, sir, it's like this," replied the knight of the napkin, pointing to a brother waiter a few tables off, "you see that man? Well, he's a Serb, and we have vat you called paired."—The Philadelphia Ledger.

The Young Father.

"Young Astor," said a Chicago editor, "has just given $100,000 to the British Red Cross. I congratulated him on his arduous last month in London, but he said, with a laugh, that such arduous was common all over England."

He said that all over England they were learning rifle shooting in their patriotic ardor now. There was a rifle shooting match not long ago in the village of Combe Martin for boys between 14 and 17. It was astonishing how many boys took part in the match—the prize was a substantial one—and some of the 17 year old youngsters had astonishingly mature faces.

"As one of these urchins was in the midst of a very brilliant display of rifle shooting the assembly was amazed to hear a little boy in the front row yell:

"Go on father! Hurray! Give us another bull's-eye."—Washington Star.

COUNTY GOV'T IN NEW YORK CITY

Reorganization Report Submitted to Mayor Mitchel.

PRESENT SYSTEM WASTEFUL

Chamberlain Henry Bruere and Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein Have Given Important Matter Exhaustive Study—Recommend That Constitution Be Amended to Permit Big Saving.

An exhaustive study of county government within the city of New York has just been completed by Chamberlain Henry Bruere and Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein. The report has been submitted to Mayor Mitchel and is now available for use by the constitutional convention. It is one of a series of studies of the mandatory provisions of law which impose expenditures on the city government without the right of discretionary action by the local authorities.

The report declares the county government within the city of New York antique and wasteful and urges a thorough reorganization of the present system. It recommends that the constitution be so amended as to permit the merger of county governments with the city government and where that is not practicable the consolidation of the several county establishments, thereby saving more than $1,000,000 annually in salaries.

The principal findings and recommendations are:

County government is inherited from colonial times and persists by reason of public apathy and private political interest.

The work of six county departments is duplicated in each of the five counties, so that thirty departments are now doing the work which six should do. There is no adequate central and responsible authority to exercise supervision or enforce co-operation.

The cost of county government provided in the tax levy of 1915 was $7,704,145.79. This means that on every $1,000 of assessed valuation the taxpayers are compelled to pay for county government $10 in Richmond county, $15 in Bronx county, $12 in Kings county, $10 in Queens county and $7 in New York county.

Field of Partisan Politics.

County government in the city of New York has been the favorite field of partisan politics and special legislation. Year after year county positions have been multiplied and county salaries increased, culminating in the creation of Bronx county at an additional annual burden of $500,000. In fifteen years the cost of county government has increased 90 per cent.

Of the forty county departments mandatory legislation deprives the budget makers of all control over the payroll cost of ten departments and leaves them powerless as to 75 per cent of the salary cost in ten other departments, 50 per cent in nine others and in addition imposes lump sum appropriations of $100,000 each for two other departments.

A striking example of the wastefulness of county government resulting from its decentralization and from its exploitation for partisan purposes is afforded by the enormous cost of preserving and restoring county records. In seventeen years over $4,250,000 has been expended for that purpose by five separate county departments, three of which have been chiefly useful as affording berths for party henchmen. If the fee earning county offices were made self supporting the taxpayers would be saved present annual deficits of over $2,000,000.

Reorganization Plan.

Indicating what might be effected, this plan of reorganization is submitted:

Replace the existing five district attorneys' offices by one for the whole city and elect the head of it.

Unite all the county clerks' offices into one office of "clerk of courts" and another of "city and county clerk," adding the present city clerk's office to the latter, the head of both to be appointed by the mayor.

Replace by a single department the registers' offices and divisions in the five counties, and have the mayor appoint the head of the combined office.

Abolish the offices of the commissioners of records, their work to be performed by the register, "city and county clerk" and the surrogate.

Replace the five offices of the commissioners of jurors by one, and head it by an appointee of the appellate division.

Abolish the offices of the public administrators and transfer their functions to the city chamberlain.

Transfer the functions of the sheriffs in all the counties as peace officers to the police department, as jailers to the department of correction and as to their remaining duties unite all the offices into one, which will also absorb the city marshals and let it be headed by an appointee of the mayor.

Consolidate the county courts with the supreme court, or effect some other kind of combination, as with the court of general sessions and the city court.

The five surrogate's courts should be consolidated into one court.

Such reorganization would reduce the present forty county departments to eight, two of which would be merged with city offices, and would result in simplified elections, better official service and economical administration.

Flour "Aged."

Bakers keep flour for about sixty days as a rule, allowing it to "age" before using. They sometimes point to this fact when "old loaves do not immediately increase in size" sympathy with a decline in the price of the miller's product.

Chandler at $1295 is the Preferred Light Six

FIGURES CAN'T LIE

Percentage Comparisons of Chandler Sales in the Principal Selling Seasons of 1914 and 1915:

APRIL	1914	1915	233% INCREASE
MAY	1914	1915	493% INCREASE
JUNE	1914	1915	646% INCREASE

THE Chandler is most popularly preferred of all the light sixes. And why? There must be some good reason. There must be several good reasons. There are. Very decidedly good reasons.

The Chandler isn't preferred simply because it was the first high-grade six that sold for less than $2000. It isn't preferred simply because it brought the six-cylinder car within reach of the average purse and pointed out the way for many other manufacturers to produce more or less similar cars.

The Chandler has met with its big popular demand because it gives more for every dollar of its price than any other car in the field.

At $1295 the Chandler gives you the finest, smoothest-running six-cylinder motor you could wish for. It is the exclusive Chandler motor—not a common ready-made stock motor. This motor—the secret of Chandler supremacy—has been left unchanged since the beginning of Chandler history—since the days when this car sold for $1795. No tinkering with it, no making of new models to cheapen its cost!

Search the whole market if you choose, and try to find the Chandler motor's equal.

The Chandler is preferred because, all the way through, it is built so well. Because it is so graceful in design, so sturdy in its construction, so roomy, so splendidly finished.

The Chandler is preferred because it is equipped with the most up-to-date and the most dependable equipment.

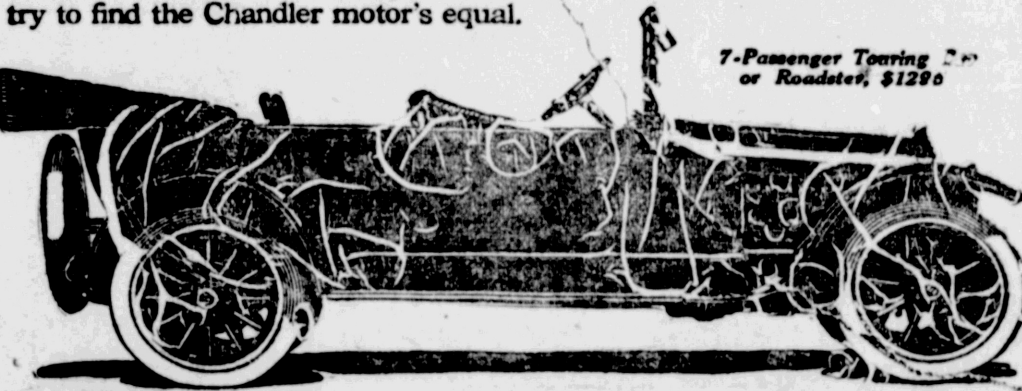

The Chandler is preferred because thousands of Chandlers have given and are giving perfect service on the road; because the public knows the element of chance is eliminated in purchasing a Chandler.

You will prefer the Chandler above other light sixes when you know the car. Come in and find out about it. Find out for yourself. Make the car prove its superiority. It can do it.

No Other Car for Less Than $2000 Gives You All These High-grade Features:

Boch magneto and spark plugs; Gray & Davis electric generator and electric starting motor; Rayfield double-jet carburetor; genuine Koyo Mercedes type radiator; cast aluminum motor base extending from frame to frame; three silent and exclusive clutches for driving motor shafts; imported angular ball bearings; silent worn-steel rear axle; auxiliary seats in tonneau of touring car are instantly adjustable and fold away entirely out of sight in back of front seat; genuine hand-built leather upholstery; Stewart vacuum gasoline feed; Goldie patent one-man top, covered with genuine leather; Jiffy curtains; Stewart-Warner speedometer; Firestone demountable rims; complete incidental equipment; and the

QUEST OF THE RED FLOWER

Romance of Two Americans
Among Mexican Bandits.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The handsome young captain of the little band of Mexican revolutionists stared intently across the table at his captive.

Ned Hallett, the captive, glared angrily back at Fernando Perez.

"You will pay dearly for attacking the mine and dispersing my men," said the American savagely.

Captain Perez smiled.

"Americans must stay at home if they wish to avoid trouble," he purred.

The young mine owner controlled his anger and brought himself to discuss terms with Captain Perez.

"I suppose it is a matter of money," he sneered. "How much will you release from your ruffianly band?"

Captain Perez twisted the ends of his silky black mustache and regarded the broad shouldered prisoner with thoughtful black eyes.

Money was a very desirable thing. He had never possessed enough of the commodity to satisfy his tastes. After this war was over the country would be too hot to hold him. Paris would be his choice, and it took money to live in Paris. He did not want to go to Paris alone either. Still he might be able to use the American in two ways. He would waive the money question now. He could kill the young mine owner afterward, and there would be very money enough derived from those very valuable diamonds in Hallett's ring and scarfpin.

"How much?" repeated Hallett.

Captain Perez waved his slim brown hand.

"It is not a question of money, señor," he lied quietly. "If you will do me a service you will earn your freedom."

"What is it you want?"

"Bring me the Red Flower."

"The Red Flower?" repeated Hallett vaguely. "I'm sure I don't know what you mean."

"There is a Red Flower in the Zamora valley that I desire to wear next to my heart," said Perez, his dark face flushing warmly and his black eyes sparkling with pleasure. "I offer you your freedom in exchange for the Red Flower, señor."

"But why don't you go and get it yourself?" questioned Hallett.

Perez regarded his questioner from under level black brows. "I cannot go, and my men would not be successful in the quest. Go, señor, and when you return with the Red Flower, I will free you."

"Shall I go, señor?" asked Hallett.

"Yes. To all outward appearances you will be quite free from espionage, but remember, señor, my wolves will be on your trail. If you are faithless to the trust I am imposing on you you will die like a dog. Bring the Red Flower to me at sunset tomorrow and you go forth free and unharmed."

"What sort of a flower is it?" asked Hallett curiously. "How shall I recognize it? Is it a cactus flower?"

Captain Perez laughed bitterly.

"No, señor; it is a cactus flower, beautiful as the morning, cruel as the thorns that beset it. You will not fail to recognize it. But, señor, Americano—and here the Mexican leaned across the table and hissed sharply—"dare not to wear the Red Flower when you find it. Hold it aloof; treasure it carefully. It is for me alone. I have watched it bud and blossom for me alone." He sank back in his chair and hung his head with sudden dejection.

"I will go," said Ned Hallett quietly.

Perez lifted his head and called sharply.

Two of his men, dressed in a ragged conglomeration of garments that included American made shirts, military trousers much the worse for wear, faded cavalry capes and broken visored caps, padded in on bare feet.

"They saluted and eyed their leader with furtive glances.

Perez spoke rapidly in Spanish and, finding that Hallett understood the language, changed to the miserable patois of the district. Hallett picked out a familiar word here and there and gleaned enough to understand that he was to be followed to the hiding place of the Red Flower and if he failed to bring the desired blossom to Perez he was to be assassinated in cold blood.

He smiled bitterly as he awaited the completion of their plans. Unarmed he would stand little chance of coming out alive after gaining possession of the mysterious Red Flower of which Perez raved. He guessed that he was to be lured to some lonely spot and murdered.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Quien sabe?" he muttered as the two men appeared to start him on his journey.

A package of food was thrust into his hands, and he was started on his way by a prick from a machete which was afterward tossed toward him.

"Take it, señor Americano," called one of his tormentors. "You will need it to cut the Red Flower!"

Rude laughter followed his going. He had picked up the machete because he knew that he would need it to cut his way through the undergrowth.

Perez had pointed out the way to the valley of the Zamora—it lay to the south and followed the muddy little river fringed with willows.

By nightfall Ned Hallett had reached the entrance to the tiny valley. He looked down on well tilled fields of cane and cotton, on red roofed adobe houses and barns and all the homely sights and sounds of farm life.

What place was this to which Perez had sent him in quest of the mysterious Red Flower?

He looked again and noted that the houses were closely shuttered, the cattle lingered disconsolately about the closed barns, the chickens had wandered unchecked among the fields and were devastating the crops, the place looked deserted.

He decided to wait until night had fallen before he investigated further in this valley of the Red Flower. He would sleep there and pluck the flower by daylight.

The night fell softly like a gray mantle over the valley. Stars pricked out in the deep blue of the sky and there was no sound save the distant flow of the little river, the murmuring discontent of the neglected cattle and the shrill cry of a night bird.

After Hallett had eaten sparingly he went hastily in search of a spring, for the peppery food had augmented his thirst. He followed a well defined trail down to the valley and presently found himself standing outside the principal door of the largest house. At his approach the denizens of the barnyard broke into a clamor of greeting.

While he hesitated on the doorstep the door was flung open, and the cold muzzle of a revolver was pressed against his temple.

"Quien es?" asked a girl's voice sharp with fear.

"Amigo," returned Ned Hallett quickly, for a weapon in the hands of a woman always inspired him with respect. "A friend!" she gasped. "I wonder if it is true?"

"You speak English," he asked eagerly. "Perhaps you are not Mexican."

"Of course I am an American," returned the girl, peering down at him. "And you—you do not speak like a native."

"I am an American—owner of the El Monte mine—captured by a roving band of insurgents. I am earning my release by fulfilling a mission for Captain Perez of—"

"Perez? The little snake! Can I trust you?" she asked in an anguished tone.

"As you would yourself," returned Ned sincerely.

"I am all alone here," she announced. "Captain Perez and his band of scoundrels kidnapped me from my father's plantation and brought me here, where he left me in charge of some women who are related to him. I have imprisoned three of the women in a cellar of the house, and the fourth one has just eluded me and I know has gone to report my insubordination to Perez. I dare not go alone into this unfriendly country. So far I have protected myself and won my way with my guns. I am a dead shot at long range, and the women were cowards. Tell me, amigo, she cried piteously, "what am I to do?"

Hallett took her trembling hand in his, and she did not withdraw it, but with feminine inconsistency she still held the revolver against his temple.

"Cheer up," said Ned practically. "We will take horses and get away from here at once. Pack up some food, enough for a couple of days, and I will get the horses ready."

"Thank God for your help!" cried the girl brokenly, as she lowered the weapon and turned away. "But, Mr. Hallett, how about your mission for Captain Perez? Your life will be in danger if you fail to accomplish it."

Hallett laughed carelessly.

"I'll take a chance on that with a horse under me and a gun in my hand and some one to protect," he said grimly. "All he sent me for was some miserable red flower he was possessed after."

"Red Flower?" echoed the girl faintly. Did you come here for the Red Flower?"

"Yes," he told me it was a cactus flower. Seems he wanted to wear it against his heart. Rather sentimental of the gallant captain," he ended sardonically.

"Don't jest," protested the girl. "Don't you understand, sir, that he meant me—he called me the Red Flower! You will know why he called me that when daylight comes and you see that my hair is red. I understand him now. He thought he could lure me out of the valley through the means of an American. Once out in the open he would shoot you and capture me. I cannot go with you, Mr. Hallett."

Ned Hallett swore roundly. "You must come," he said shortly. "Of course, now that I understand the situation you must know that my pact with Perez is ended. I will see that you get safely across the border, and I will notify your people of your safety. You can trust me, Miss—"

"Alice Latham," she supplied; then she bent her head and looked closely at him in the semidarkness of the doorway. "I will trust you," she said quickly. "I will get ready while you find the horses. The two blacks are the strongest and the best for hard traveling. I will be ready in ten minutes. Take these pistols. There are more here and plenty of ammunition."

Fifteen minutes later they rode quietly out of the valley, both of them strongly armed and with food and water packed on Hallett's saddle. Before they left Alice led down the fence rails so that the neglected cattle could rove around and find food and water.

For several hours they rode along the river bank in silence, and it was not until Ned made the turn that would take them to the border of the states and thus made clear his intention to play false to Perez that the wolves of the Mexican captain were loosed.

They fired at Hallett from ambush and missed. His black horse, accustomed to guerrilla warfare, carried him into the thicket so quickly that he surprised the two spies of Perez. He shot one in the shoulder, and as the man sank to the ground the other one received a shot that disabled him.

Then the two Americans fled rapidly through the night toward the land of their birth. And when another midday sun glared down on the parched earth it found Alice Latham and Ned Hallett safe in the little Texas town of Speedwell, where they were sending a messenger to the Latham plantation with good news of her safety.

When Ned Hallett got his first good look at Alice Latham he drew a long breath and exclaimed:

"Now, I understand why Perez called you the Red Flower! I never knew a red haired girl could be so beautiful!" he added involuntarily.

Alice Latham laughed and shook back the beautiful red fleece of hair that framed her perfect face. Her red brown eyes held magic for Ned Hallett, and it is not strange that he determined to win and wear the Red Flower for his own.

"As you appear to have saved my girl's life, I rather think it belongs to you, Hallett," was Mr. Latham's decision some months later when Ned put the momentous question to him.

So Ned wore the Red Flower after all, and Captain Perez went to Paris alone.

Valuable Vocabulary.

The employer who was willing to pay $3 a week for an office boy advertised for a boy. About 100 replied. To the most likely looking lad he said:

"You look all right, but I must test your vocabulary. You know what 'vocabulary' means?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well, I want a boy with a vocabulary. My customers are well bred, educated people, and I must have a boy who can answer them with something more intelligent than 'Uh-huh,' 'Yep' and 'I guess so.'"

He put several questions to the boy, and received satisfactory replies.

"You will do," he said. "You may go to work now."

"I beg your pardon," said that amazing boy, "but there is one example of my vocabulary that you have not heard."

"Well, what is it?"

"I am sorry, sir, but I could not think of using this kind of language for $3 a week. It is worth $5."

The employer concluded that it was and paid it.—New York Times.

WAGON HAULS FOR FARM PRODUCTS

Great Benefits Accrue to Farmers From Better Roads

RAILROADS CUT DISTANCES.

Cotton States Have the Longest Hauls to Market and New York State Has the Shortest—General Improvement Marks Recent Years.

It would require about 6,358,000 days for one wagon, or that number of wagons for one day, to haul from the farms of the country the portion of the corn crop that is marketed in an average year. It would require one wagon 6,807,000 days to haul the average wheat crop to the market or to shipping points and 2,532,000 days to haul the cotton crop.

These figures are contained in a farm bulletin just issued by the department of agriculture, which deals with the subject of wagon hauls for farm products. According to this bulletin, the average distance of the farms of the United States from market is over six miles, while those farthest away from market average more than eight miles.

The average distance of farms in New York state from the market is five miles, while the average for the more remote farms is seven miles. This means that for the general average New York farmers are one and one-half miles and those more remotely located 1.7 miles nearer market than farmers generally throughout the country.

It would require one farm wagon 33,400 days to haul to market an average wheat crop in New York state, while the marketed portion of an average corn crop could be hauled by one wagon in 3,400 days.

The bulletin is based on reports received from county and township crop correspondents by the bureau of crop estimates. These reports show that the longer hauls to market generally are in cotton states or in the Rocky mountain region. The smaller loads also are in the cotton states. The average size of a wagon load of cotton is three bales, or 1,500 pounds, while the average wagon load of wheat is 33.5 bushels, or 3,200 pounds.

However, while the size of the cotton load is much smaller than that of the corn load, the value of the former is greater. The average value of a load of cotton, based on farm prices Dec. 1, 1913, was $183; wheat, $43; corn, $28.

The bulletin states that wagon hauls are much shorter this year than 1906, when the last similar inquiry was made.

"Railroad building," it is stated, "during the past nine years has brought some farms nearer to shipping points and markets and has helped to shorten the average distance hauled and to increase the average number of trips per day."

"During the seven years following 1906 more than 32,000 miles of new railroad were built, and several thousand more miles have been added since 1913, so that there are at least 15 per cent more miles of steam railroads in the United States now than in 1906."

"In addition to this new mileage of steam railroads the hauls of some farmers have no doubt been shortened by new freight carrying electric railroads."

The figures indicate a considerable rise in the average cost per day to the farmer in hauling his products. However, this higher cost per day is offset partly or wholly by the larger quantities hauled per day in 1915 compared with 1906.

Highway Legislation in Arkansas.

Among the enactments affecting road work made by the legislature of Arkansas is a proposed amendment to the constitution which will have a very marked effect upon road work of the state, according to reports.

The amendment has been adopted by both branches of the legislature and must be voted upon by the people of the state at the next general election. It permits counties to issue bonds for the construction of roads up to an amount that can be raised for by a three mill levy on all taxable property within the several counties, the life of the bonds not to exceed thirty years.

It is reported that no opposition to the adoption of the amendment is expected.

FARM POULTRY

BUILDING UP POULTRY FARM

Necessary to Make Right Kind of Start and Work Must Be Faithfully Performed Every Day.

(By MICHAEL K. BOYER.)

A poultry farm built upon a secure foundation is sure to be successful if it is afterward properly managed. It is not only necessary to make the right kind of a start, but the work must be regularly and faithfully performed day in and day out.

As a rule beginners start with great enthusiasm, and not a few build air castles, but to many of them the same-ness of the work, the close application, the constant watching, soon become monotonous, and then there is a shrinking of duty, neglect, carelessness, and the enterprise becomes a failure.

The point is to begin small—measure the size of the initial step with the amount of capital and experience at hand.

It is often the case that men with more or less available capital, practically put all their money in horses and stock. This is a mistake, and more so

A Purebred Cock.

In the case of those who have no personal experience in the work.

In the parlance of today, "a man must be on to his job." He must know what to do and how best to do it. He must be aware that inexperience may cause leaks, and leaks will soon sink the enterprise.

It is a noteworthy fact that most successful poultry farms of today are those that have started from a small beginning and gradually expanded as business and experience warranted.

Men who would not go into the dry goods business for the reason that they knew nothing about it, will build houses and stock them and expect the hens to do the rest.

Hens, like cows, yield a profit according to the treatment given them. They will not stand neglect. They are hard workers when properly managed and rewarded, but they can be the most idle and indifferent producers when made to shift for themselves.

Our agricultural colleges have done much to teach the new aspirants how to tread in poultry paths, and men and women who endeavor to improve by these excellently arranged courses of instruction will have won half the battle—the other half naturally belongs to practical experience.

A man with $1,000 would better invest one-half of it in buildings, stock and fixtures and reserve the other half for feed and running expenses, than invest the entire amount in the equipment and have to go in debt for the feed.

Eggs and poultry are staple crops and the demand is far greater than the supply. This country needs more poultry farms, and they will be successful when properly built and managed. But the beginning must be small and the growth gradual so that every part of the work is promptly noted and carefully and correctly performed.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke).

New York, August 14.—Owing to the kindness of Mike Gallagher, a waiter, the Detroit Tigers will win the American League pennant this year. Mike gave Hughey a good luck token and now Mike, Hughey and the Tigers are absolutely confident that the Tigers will nose out all opposition.
Mike waits table at the New York Athletic Club in Travers Island, New York. For 10, those many years, he has been an admirer of Hughey's. He's seen him on the ball field very often but never did he get within speaking distance of Hughey until Hughey went to the Travers Island place during the Tigers recent visit in New York for the purpose of satisfying the inner man.
And then Mike realized the ambition of his life—he got an introduction to Hughey and actually shook hands with the redheaded leader. If you don't believe it, Mike will let you see the very hand that grasped Hughey's.
"I've always wanted you to win," said Mike to Hughey, "and I know how it can be done. Here, take this, and you can't lose."

Whereupon Mike placed a little good luck piece in Hughey's hand and Hughey, being almost as superstitious as a person as George Stallings, took it after murmuring his thanks. The Tigers started on a winning streak the next day and they have been breezing along ever since at a rate that has struck terror into the hearts of the foes who have been battling with them for first place honors.

Order to Browbeat Tebeau.

Jack Kearney, a St. Louis notable, tells this one.
"One afternoon during the old days of baseball Patsy Tebeau and his spiders came to town. Patsy was in an extremely warlike mood the first day and he feared the umpire after every second decision. Patsy, as the old fans know, had quite an extensive and profane vocabulary and that day in particular he called to his tongue some of the most frightful sounding speeches that ever echoed across a baseball diamond.
"I was in the newspaper game then and was covering" the game. It so happened that my managing editor, a testy old fellow, who abhorred profanity, was in the audience.
"The next day the chief sent for me.
"You heard Tebeau's language, didn't you," demanded the chief.
"I answered in the affirmative.
"Well, sir," thundered the boss, "that sort of thing must stop; I want you to go to Tebeau's hotel and tell him firmly and emphatically, that he can't use that sort of talk in this city, and that you have my orders. If he refuses to cut it, to roast him in the columns of this paper. I'll show this Tebeau that he can't bluff me."

Kearney refuses to say he "covered" that assignment but the betting is 10 to 1 he didn't.
National League Shortstops Best.
The National League seems to have the edge on the American and Federal in shortstopping stars.
Fletcher seems to be better than any four men that the rival leagues can put forth.
The American League shortstops are good—but the best cannot top the ability of those in the National.
Barry is a wonder; so is Chapman of the Indians. Bush of the Tigers and Weaver of the White Sox. But none individually shines forth as superior to the best in the National and collectively the 8 American Leaguers are rated second to their rivals in the National.

In Recorder's Court.

Albert Strehan was arrested at the West Shore depot on Friday night by Policeman Kuehn on the charge of being disorderly. He only recently was discharged from jail after serving a term of thirty days. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned this morning before Recorder Lang and the case was adjourned until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. In the meantime he will be examined as to his sanity.
Special Officer George DeGraff arrested John Bostrick, a Hungarian, about 3 o'clock this morning for being drunk and disorderly on Wall street. When taken before the recorder he said he had work on a nearby farm and was allowed to go on his promise to get out of town.
Former Alderman William Bilyou was arrested this morning by Sergeant Hanley on a warrant sworn out by Conductor William Deegan of the Colonial line on the charge of assault and disorderly conduct on a trolley car. Deegan claimed that during an argument Bilyou struck him in the face. The defendant pleaded not guilty and the case was set down for a hearing on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

CLEARWATER'S GREAT SPEECH

"Within 25 years the government of the United States will be so changed that we would not recognize it. The furious speed with which the American people are rushing into new conditions will revolutionize its own conditions, will revolutionize its own system before it knows it. Every tendency of the times is toward the subordination of the individual, on which the government was founded, and that is the theory of its own system, and toward the supervision of the whole business of life, down to the smallest details of the government."

Quoting these words from Constant uttered only 50 days ago, Judge A. T. Clearwater nearly swept the delegates off their feet Thursday afternoon in a brilliant and convincing plea for the adoption of the proposal of William Barnes designed to permit the people to reserve to themselves the granting of special privileges to certain individuals at the expense of all the people of the state, says the Albany Evening Journal. Many thought that the Barnes amendment would be overwhelming, but the arguments of Judge Clearwater, in his favor, and the debate dragged all through the evening session, and a rule was adopted making it a special order for Monday night.

"I know Mr. Barnes does not mean by this provision to tie the hands of the state so that for the future it may go forth impotently, without pity, without capacity to help, and turn its stern back to all voicing of suffering, whether in its midst or elsewhere," declared George W. Wickham, who led the bitter attack on the proposal.

"If it were ever suggested by anyone but a man with the intellectual integrity of Mr. Barnes, it would be laughed out of court," shouted Senator Robert B. Wagner, who made a fervent plea in opposition.

"Mr. Barnes," said Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman—the man who said the proposal was full of dynamite—"presented his proposition to the committee with the great force with immense power of depiction, convincing, and even those who differed from him have to acknowledge, as I freely acknowledge, that no proposition submitted to the convention, it seems to me, is more full of thought, has more profound thought than this proposition."

The Debaters.

Nathan Burkan, E. Clarence Aiken, Charles B. Sears and Herbert Parsons opposed the proposal, as did Dr. Schurman, Senator Wagner and Mr. Wickham. George L. Bockes told that he had cast a decided "no" against the amendment in committee, but had come to realize that it was aimed at the solution of a great problem and insisted that it should be advanced to order of final passage at least. Ledyard P. Hale, while not in accord with the entire proposal stood for the submission of the people of the minimum wage proposition in order that the courts may not be embarrassed, as they were when the original workmen's compensation act was passed by the legislature. It fell to the lot of H. Leroy Austin, late in the night, to sum up in favor of the proposal, and he poured hot shot into the ranks of the opposition.

But it was Judge Clearwater—small of stature, but a mental giant, who had frequently refused diplomatic and political positions—to impress upon the basic law framers that the Barnes proposal reaches the very fundamental principle of free government. He declared America to be at the threshold of her problem—a problem prophesied by Montesquieu, foretold by Macaulay, and described as being at our doors by Bryce and Constant.

"The American spirit," the old American spirit," he shouted, "is passing and soon will have passed forever. When De Toqueville said that it would come, when Montesquieu said it must come, and when Macaulay but a few years before his death prophesied it, they were looked upon as prophets of very little worth, and it may be said that Mr. Barnes and the men who advocate the provisions embodied in this amendment, may be like John the Baptist, mere voices crying in the wilderness, preaching to unheeding ears."

Next Convention.

"But, sir," he said solemnly, as the stenographers left their desks and sat near him in order to be able to catch every word and the delegates and spectators in the crowded galleries leaned forward with rapt attention, "at your age, and at the age of the men who surround me here, I predict that when you will be seated in another constitutional convention in this room and in this building, if this amendment or something like it is not written into this constitution, you will regret, and the delegates to this convention will regret, that they had not the vision and the foresight to guard against the inevitable. Mark my word, and this I say to a man of your future that sitting in another constitutional convention, and my God speed your life, mark what I say to you, when you are seated in that chair."
"Now, I can address myself in the limited time at my disposal to a single phase of the cause, which creates the condition which I regard as menacing. I would be very glad if I had the opportunity to cover the entire field, but I cannot. Let me address myself to the single phase of which Constant speaks, and of which all of these illustrious men I have spoken of have referred, and that is the changing character of our civilization due to our foreign immigration."

The Proletarian.

"Mr. Barnes has referred to the proletarian. Up to this time, sir, up to within a very few years, there were no proletarians in this country, and when I use the term 'proletarian' I use it as it was used by the Romans. I mean the man who has no property, who never will have any property, who has not the industry, the frugality, the self-denial to accumulate property; a man who will breed children, and who will himself throw himself, without scruple or reserve, upon a community for support.
"That is the proletarian, and that is the proletarian class that is growing up in our great seaboard cities, and in no city greater than in this imperial city of New York, which any man might be proud to represent in this hall or anywhere else.

even with an erotic touch, that grasping for anything which tickles the senses, that diplomacy which has introduced the vaudeville on the stage and in daily life, that desire for advantage over one's fellows, either by special privilege wrung from governmental influence or secured by the alluring and seductive influences of the promise of the ballot. With all this also has come a more sinister trend. The teachers of our youth gradually are abandoning their belief in discipline. As long as society was controlled, it was by the moral influences of Puritanism, the lack of training, the insubordination under social authority and the disobedience of moral instruction was largely self-limiting. Now, sir, we have a growing and irritable impatience of discipline, an impatience which makes itself felt not only in daily life, but in our public schools, an impatience which, in judgment, rapidly is becoming a menace to social safety and to American institutions."

Allowed the Vote.

"Nobody knows it better than the representatives of the city of New York. Now these people who are not familiar with our ideals and our institutions, are going to become American citizens and they are going to be allowed to vote. They elect members of the legislature. They create their own condition and demand equality in the legislature. If they have not done it heretofore, they will very shortly do it.
"The question is, what privileges will they demand? Have they the American spirit? Do they care for American ideals? Will they care? But it is to guard against the possibility of probability, that they will not, that this amendment to the constitution is offered for your consideration."

From the People.

"Is it wise to deprive the legislature of any power? No. If they become sufficiently dominant to get the special privileges which they demand, then let the legislature get it from them and let that be an amendment to the constitution of the state, so that these special privileges shall be granted by the people themselves, but do not let a subtle, kneebending, vote-grafting, favor seeking legislature of the future, confer these special privileges without a direct charter from the people and authority to do so.
"I might cite you, sir, if the hour permitted, if my time permitted, many, many opinions from many, many publicists, sustaining this contention, which I want to impress upon your mind, and the minds of the delegates to this convention."

Ideal of Forefathers.

"Now, what was the ideal of the generations of whom the men of this convention are the children? What was the ideal of the father of every man who sits within the sound of my voice? Frugality, honesty, simplicity, more education for his boy than he had himself, greater opportunity to his child than was afforded to him, the desire to accumulate sufficient property so that his children never should be dependent upon others, the desire to amass enough of competence so that in his old age, when helpless, possibly when ill, he should not be dependent upon others—the pride of the American. That was the American spirit. A contempt for the proletariat, an unwillingness to receive special privilege, masculine, virile, in his simplicity and his ruggedness—that was the American father of every man who listens to me, whether born upon our soil or whether he came here from abroad. That was the ideal that he sought to cultivate in the minds of his children who are sitting here.
"Has that ideal changed, sir. I think it has. I am not alone in thinking that it has. It is because I think it has changed that I wrote this paper and will deliver it, and it is because I think it will change still more that I stand here advocating this amendment or something substantially like it."

New Condition.

"How have we changed? With this let me close. Pari passu with this racial degeneration has disappeared that reserve, that Puritanism with its spirit of restraint which tended to the elevation of the citizen, and in its train has come that influx of sensuousness, that receding of religion, that longing for amusement, that greedy craving for joy
